

You are invited to experience and learn about Activity in the Age of Social Media

A day-long workshop to be held in association with the international conference

ISCAR 2014

9.00am until 4.00 pm on September 29, 2014

the Novotel, Olympic Boulevard, Sydney Olympic Park

This workshop will be preceded by a guided, month-long, online, interactive social media experience between all participants: expert and novice

Both the online and the workshop experiences are designed as an exploration and experience the role of social media in supporting the complex activities of modern life

This program is for you if you are:

- perplexed by the array of social media and want to explore how some can benefit what you do
- in business and facing complex problems where innovation with collaborative media could help
- a researcher looking for new approaches to investigate complex socio-technical phenomena
- curious about what people do with social media, where it has come from and where it may lead.
- wanting to play with social media in a safe environment and to simulate future scenarios of action

If you register for program you will participate in

- a global, online launch with other participants at a date to be determined in August 2014
- engagement, interaction and collaborative discussions with experts and other participants for several weeks in social media of your choice
- the workshop on September 29 where participants report back on the experience, reflect on what they have learnt, share experiences and hear from experts in the field
- further opportunities to work together on tangible outcomes such as ongoing mentoring, skills exchanges, an ebook of lessons learnt, community blog, and academic papers.
